RE: Comments on 2012 Miscellaneous Tariff Bills (MTBs)

Dear Chairman Baucus and Ranking Member Hatch:

On behalf of the American Apparel & Footwear Association (AAFA), I am writing in strong support of the Miscellaneous Tariff Bill (MTB) process and, as outlined below, in support of many of the specific bills introduced as part of the 2012 MTB process.

AAFA is the national trade association representing apparel, footwear and other sewn products companies, and their suppliers, which compete in the global market. AAFA's members produce, market, and sell apparel and footwear in virtually every country around the world, including the United States. The U.S. apparel and footwear industry employs over 4 million U.S. workers who support this global supply chain in research and development, design, manufacturing, compliance, sourcing, logistics, marketing, merchandising, and retail.

As such, the MTB process has become critical for U.S. apparel and footwear manufacturers and importers alike to reduce costs on inputs no longer available in the United States that are used in U.S. manufacturing as well as to reduce the cost of finished footwear and apparel no longer made (or never made) in the United States for American families. Beyond these important benefits, AAFA's strong support for the MTB process is derived from the fact that, thanks in part to the very public and transparent nature of process, bills originally introduced on behalf of a few entities have in the end benefitted large swaths of the apparel and footwear industry.

Thanks in part to the efforts of the Senate Finance Committee, the MTB process has in the last few years become the most transparent and open legislative process in Congress. That process starts with clear guidelines for submission of MTB bills, essentially that the temporary reduction or suspension of the import duties cost the U.S. government less than $500,000 in lost revenue and that the product in question is not made in the United States.

The process then enables every Senator, regardless of whether they are members of the Senate Finance Committee or not, to fully participate in the process on behalf of their constituents. In order to participate, however, the member must make public that they have submitted the bill, disclose the name of the company or constituent who has requested the bill, and sign a document verifying that the bill meets the guidelines established by the Committee.

Then, in a measure that is unprecedented, all of the submitted bills are posted on the Internet in a single, well-publicized website. The public is then afforded the opportunity to comment on every single bill submitted. The Committee then posts all of the comments for public review on its website. Simultaneously, all of the bills are reviewed by multiple U.S. government agencies – the U.S. International Trade Commission (ITC), the U.S. Department of Commerce, the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative, and others – who have relevant industry and policy expertise.

Once this vetting process is completed, the Committee would then submit a final bill to Congress for their review and approval. The provisions contained in this final bill, having survived the vetting process, are truly non-controversial and provide direct benefits to multiple U.S. businesses, U.S. workers, and U.S. consumers.

In this year's process, AAFA believes that dozens of the bills submitted fully meet the criteria established by the Committee and provide direct benefits to multiple U.S. businesses, U.S. workers, and U.S. consumers. As such, AAFA urges the Committee to include these provisions in its final MTB legislation.

For ease of review, the bills supported by AAFA have been divided into four broad categories – footwear, apparel, travel goods and fashion accessories, and textiles.

AAFA supports the inclusion of the following footwear-related bills in any final MTB package:
